Work-related road driving in the rail industry

IOSH Railway Group
19 March 2015
Network Rail Westwood Development Centre, 320 Westwood Heath Road, Coventry CV4 8GP

Work-related road risk in the rail industry is a topic that is currently high on many companies’ risk-management agendas. Keeping the rail industry moving is reliant on many workers travelling via road to and from work sites across the UK. The risk to these workers and how accidents/incidents are managed and recorded have become a topic of increasing priority in managing overall workforce safety for many businesses and safety professionals.

Hosted in conjunction with the Rail Safety and Standards Board (RSSB), this one-day event is an opportunity to hear from both senior figures in the rail industry, explaining industry goals and strategies, and company representatives, providing best-practice case studies. There will also be thought-provoking presentations of real-life incidents and the consequences both to individuals and organisations.

Who should attend?
This event will be beneficial for:
- health and safety directors, managers and project managers; and
- those with an interest in safety management.

What’s in it for me?
Delegates will have a greater understanding of the risks associated with work planning and fatigue, including best practices that they can take back to their respective companies and a strategic vision of how the rail industry is approaching the problems over the course of control period 5.

If you gain value from this event, you may record it in your CPD portfolio.
